

Ohio State University Extension Hancock County is pleased to welcome Cassie Turner as the new Extension Educator for 4-H Youth Development.

Cassie grew up on a family grain & cattle farm in Auglaize County where she was an active “Third-generation” 4-Her. She graduated from the University of Findlay with a B.S. in Biology in 2000 and holds an M.S. in Human Community Resource Development from The Ohio State University.

Most recently, Cassie served as the Extension Educator 4-H Youth Development in Meigs County (southeast Ohio). She worked there for six years and was successful in re-establishing a teen leaders program. She was also able to overhaul quality assurance, increase community clubs by 30%, and expanded programming to Cloverbuds (youth Kindergarten – 2nd grade).

Cassie is looking forward to once again becoming part of the Hancock County community, and providing leadership toward a consistently excellent 4-H program.
